One of the core values of U.S. society is that everyone has the right to work. For individuals with disabilities, however, this value has been more of a dream than a reality. Individuals with disabilities have substantially higher unemployment rates than those who are not disabled. According to the President's Committee on the Employment of People With Disabilities (1992), 31% of people with disabilities were employed or actively seeking employment, whereas more than 78% of Americans without disabilities of people with disabilities in the world of work is of major concern to society of the world of the work of the proposed of the
